

CLEMENCEAU MARRIED SANBORN-TON GIRL

From Transcript-Journal, Franklin Falls, New Hampshire

The death of the great French statesman, Georges Clemenceau, recalls the fact that his wife, Mary C. Plummer Clemenceau, was a daughter of Dr. William K. Plummer, a Sanborn native and a member of a long list of Plummer, Gilman, Browns and others now living in this vicinity.

The marriage of the "Tiger of France" took place June 28, 1869, when he was attending school at Bridgeport, Conn. A part of their married life was spent in France, although the American couple became estranged from the French statesman, returned to America a few years before her death about 1895.

They had three children, Madeline, born June 2, 1870, Theresa J., born June 10, 1872, and a son, born November 10, 1874. Mrs. Clemenceau was a grand-daughter of Nicholas P. Plummer, her uncle, who was known as the "Hermit of the Woods" and whose life and times have been volumes printed in this paper.

She was a woman of great character and a great patriot. She spent a greater part of her life in France. The location of the Clemenceau family in North Sanborn is known to the townsfolk as a high place and will long be known as the Clemenceau Woods road.

One of the Plummer family emigrated from Wales in 1833 and settled in North Sanborn, Mass. The first to come to this place was Joseph Plummer, who lived here in 1777-79 and what has long been known as the Plummer neighborhood near the Merced.

NUTMEG LETTER

So great has been the boom in real estate and building, and so eager have people been to be within commuting distance of New York City that in the past few years Connecticut, along Long Island Sound as far as Bridgeport, has become a continuous suburb of the metropolis. From Stamford alone there are fifteen hundred regular daily commuters to New York by train. Stamford is thirty-eight miles from New York City. Most of the commuters from Stamford are business men and women, though there are also artists and writers and professional men on the trains daily. It seems that people from Connecticut go to "the City" to earn their bread and butter.

From the Norwalks and New Canaan homes of the commuters are artists and writers going to their various studios and offices in the city. With everyone here it is always "the City". "He goes into the City every day", or "I must go to the City today for some shopping". Not all can go to the City to do their shopping, for the nearer New York you get, the higher are the prices, and the thirty ones in Stamford and the Norwalks go back to Bridgeport for marketing and other shopping. It pays for one, after he has just jumped off the train from the City, to get out his car and take a little drive up to Bridgeport every Saturday afternoon for his weekly tour of shopping. There you will find the stores crowded with many who are not Bridgeporters, and from their cars New York lives on the Connecticut commuters, so Bridgeport lives in turn also on the nutmegs further south.

There isn't a great deal of woods left in this part of the state and if you can get a house or a few acres of land with half a dozen trees thereon you are lucky. We are fortunate. We have a young forest of spruce trees upon which we lovingly gaze from our spacious living room windows. This morning there were three large gray squirrels chasing each other through the trees. We hope to see more of them. I put a Thanksgiving dinner out for them, but they ungratefully ignored it. We think we have great advantages because of being away from the noise of the city or town and furthermore because we are in the midst of a colony of artists and literary people. And while we have no snow and probably never will have much, we often think fondly of Maine and New Hampshire, though much more preferring both their beautiful states in the glory of the summer.

"STRAINING AT A KNAT"

Under the above headline the Presque Isle Star-Herald has the following editorial:

"Our esteemed townsman, L. S. Bean seems to be in the way of receding. A lot of valuable free advertising, having been notified to appear before a legal tribunal in the near future, to answer why he should not be restrained from further conducting so-called 'automobile lotteries'."

"The Attorney General of Maine has come to the conclusion that these enterprises are against the law, and that it will be conducive to the moral health of society to have them stopped."

"The point involved in the controversy whether they are lotteries in the meaning and intent of the statute, is so fine in the way of legal distinction, that the case may be argued on either side with about equal plausibility. If they are obnoxious to the law, the conclusion to that effect is pretty far fetched, so far as any moral principle is concerned."

"Personally Mr. Bean is a very reputable citizen of the best and most progressive county in the State. He would not willingly violate any law involving the moral welfare of the public. He has an excellent reputation for being a law abiding citizen, for liberality in all good causes, and for public spirit and business enterprise."

"It may be a debatable question whether these so-called 'lotteries', which the Attorney General seeks to place under the ban, are profitable to our merchants from a business point of view, but their moral influence, one way or the other, would almost seem to be pretty nearly negligible."

"If the Attorney General and those who are behind him in this crusade, are really sincere, and wish to wage a warfare against abuses which are really pernicious in their moral influence, there is plenty of big game in that direction highly desirable to get rid of, which they are ignoring. When these vicious things, reeking with bad influence, are untouched and ignored, it raises the point whether or not the good people headed by the Attorney General, are not 'straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel', and whether they do not have some ulterior, possibly political, object in view."

"There you have it! A praiseworthy endeavor of the local paper to help a little out of the tangle of the unenforced state law. That is it. Nothing more or less."

Children's Musterole is so good old Musterole you have known so long, in milder form.

Working like the trained masseur, this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other ingredients, when rubbed naturally, penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain.

Give MOTHER What She Really Wants This Christmas ~

a Few Minutes Out of the Busy Day Just for HERSELF.

$195 Cash—$210 Time

Our stores carry two of the most widely known electric ranges on the market . . . the Hotpoint and Universal, to satisfy the most discriminating tastes in style, size or color combinations.

Both the Universal and the Hotpoint are good reliable ranges. People's taste varies and for that reason some prefer one model to that of the other; were they to choose either they will be equally satisfied.

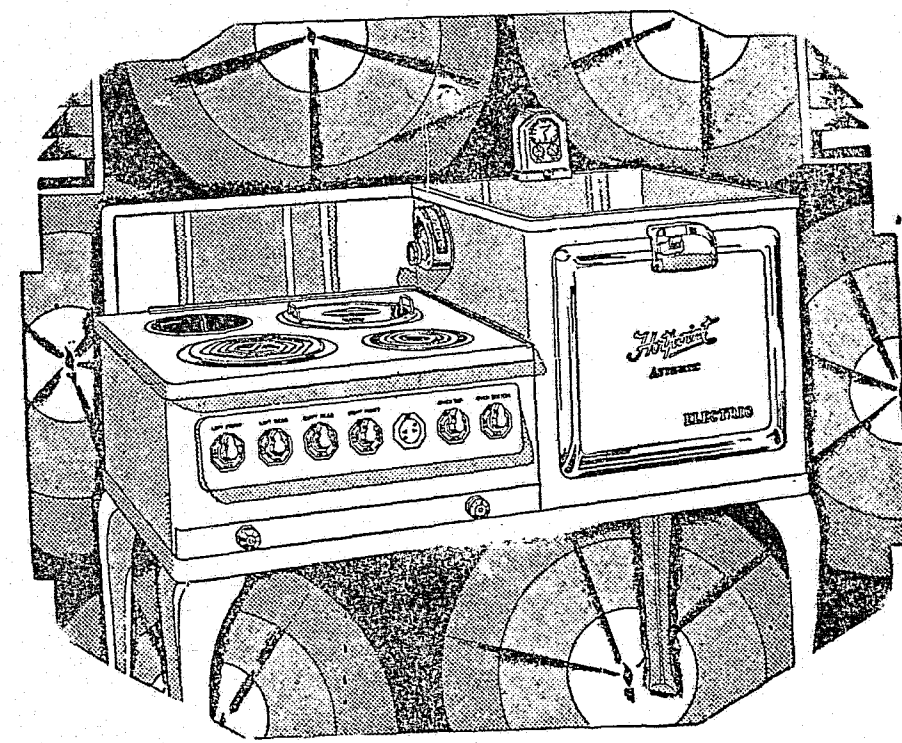

The model pictured here has the time and temperature control features which assure you of the same uniform results every time; it comes in gray enamel with white porcelain front. Sells regularly for $265, special Christmas price of $195, installed.

In the busy hubbub of the average family what Mother would not throw up her hands joyfully and thank any member of her family for providing a way whereby she could save time, tedious routine, labor and ACTUALLY GIVE HER A FEW EXTRA MINUTES FOR HERSELF!

Wouldn't it be about the best Christmas present that could be given? Surely one which would show the kindness of the giver in a way that scarcely any other gift would.

Every time an electrical appliance is added to the family group some work is made easier, quicker, and better AND IN THE END GIVES A LITTLE MORE LEISURE. If you don't believe it, ask the woman who has an electric washer. And so it is with the other electrical appliances.

This year our stores are featuring two major appliances for the thoughtful giver—two appliances that mean more comfort, more leisure and WHICH WILL MAKE MOTHER HAPPIER AND THE HOME A BETTER PLACE IN WHICH TO LIVE—an Electric Range and Electric Water Heater.

$195 Cash—$210 Time

With the modern Hotpoint automatic electric range shown above, Mother can place a complete meal in the oven. Then it takes but ten seconds to set the automatic electric timer for the time cooking is to start and stop, and the automatic temperature control for the exact heat to be maintained during the cooking. Then she can leave the kitchen or the house for all day. When she returns, dinner will be scientifically cooked to perfection and ready to serve. IT'S LIKE HAVING A MAID AT NO COST! Regularly sells for $265. Our special Christmas price at $195, installed.

For the small family it is ideal, it comes in a black enamel finish with white porcelain front, has three cooking units including the oven with temperature control features. The regular price is $175 specially reduced for the Christmas season to $137.50.

Electrically Heated HOT Water

Ready at Mother's Finger Tips 24 hours a day

And what better gift than a Sepco Electric Water Heater that provides a continuous supply of hot water (and it is HOT—150 degrees F.) 24 hours a day.

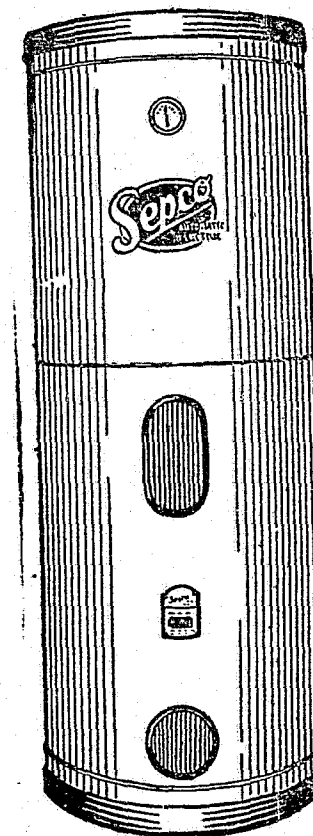

Surely a gift that gives Mother, as well as many other members of the family, a generous supply of hot water for the bath, dishes, washing and the many other uses in the home, would be a most welcome gift.

The Sepco automatic is "the finest electric hot water system that I have ever known, I would not ask for anything better" so say nearly 300 customers who now use them in our territory.

The guaranteed copper tank is fully enclosed with a granulated corp insulation which prevents the least possible radiation of heat to the outside which means a big saving.

You need never give a thought as to whether the water is hot for with the Sepco on the job—IT IS SURE TO BE!

NORWAY VICINITY

Church bells at 10 o'clock Friday forenoon announced the beginning of the health seal drive in town.

Melvin "Cappy" Smith has returned to the sporting game and is in charge of the McGready pool room and bowling alley.

Shiners by the thousand for pickered bait have been rounded up by E. E. Edgercomb and Carl Foss and supplied to fishermen. They estimate 7,000 are in a box anchored in the stream back of the electric power house at Ward 8. Last year shiners were scarce and only a few were collected, but this season the men had good luck with only a few red fins in the lot. The majority are small and just right for ice fishing.

Thanksgiving Day was quiet with many guests in town to visit those not celebrating elsewhere. The colleges were represented by students home for the day as vacation is not until Christmas. Movies, afternoon and evening and the K. P. hall caught many who needed to relax after the feast. Youngsters found pleasure on the ice even during the snow squall and falling temperature. Outside the family circles there wasn't much excitement.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO ADVERTISE
THE STATE OF MAINE

An advertisement for Maine on every container of Maine goods shipped out to the markets of the country, multiplying by millions of "lines" the space which state and private enterprise buy and bring immediate profit to Maine farmers, manufacturers and fishery owners, is urged by Harry R. Lewis, Rhode Island's Commissioner of Agriculture, who will be a speaker at the Second Annual Conference in Conference at Lewiston on Nov. 1 and 2.

It took the finest display of Maine products he has ever seen, Commissioner Lewis says, to bring home to him the great opportunity which the Pine Tree State is missing in its failure to capitalize its name. This was the recent exhibit at the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass., with its "wonderful variety and very attractive products manufactured in Maine."

"I was deeply impressed," he says, "with the fact that nowhere on these articles, on cans or containers, did I see featured in an impressive way the fact that these were Maine goods. There was a wonderful opportunity for the state in Maine to carry on the cans and cases the label which is coming into such wide use in the identification of New England food products."

"We have simply got to overcome our indifference, or, if you will, if you want to call it such—boost for our respective New England States. We cannot help but think of the way California glorifies in telling New England consumers, by appropriate labels and trade marks, that many of the commodities which they are consuming are produced, packed and shipped from the Pacific Coast."

What a favorable reaction we would get if we took an equal interest in showing our great New England consuming population that the products which we offer here are New England grown. There is no better way to do it than to identify the case of canned goods, the can, the package in which the cans are packed, with the New England label.

"This is not a fanciful suggestion, but one judged purely by the dollars and cents placed in the producers' and consumers' pockets. It has been demonstrated in the last two years that where commodities have been standardized and graded to meet the New England requirements, a substantial increase in prices has resulted. This has been demonstrated very definitely in maple products in Vermont; apples and certain vegetables in Massachusetts; and eggs in Rhode Island and Connecticut. This is something to think about."

"New England farmers and the New England foodstuffs will benefit greatly through a greater development of proper packaging of agricultural commodities."

"The farmer will benefit through a more attractive package and more satisfied consumers at better prices."

"The handler will benefit through traffic in commodities which are easier to handle, easier to store and which give greater satisfaction all the way down the line."

"The interest of consumers, and their consequent demand for the goods, will be stimulated, and their confidence in Maine products increased by the protection afforded through such packages. Substitution is an evil especially to be guarded against in view of the great competition of distant-produced commodities. Goods in packages are much more likely to reach the ultimate consumer in the condition in which they left the farm or factory—a protection to both consumer and producer."

"New England, for the last decade has shown a markedly increasing interest in the development and utilization of her large tracts of forest land. The New England farmer, especially in the northern areas, will benefit very directly through a greater utilization of his forest lands in the manufacture of suitable packages, whether this be lumber for the manufacturer of wooden boxes or wood for pulp to be turned into fibre board containers."

"I sincerely believe we have not taken full advantage of the opportunities which present themselves through a greater utilization of packaging as a means of more efficiently standardizing, transferring, advertising and merchandizing the products of the New England farmer."
